The new Keating–OnSight–Melanson KOM Colorado Poll™ conducted online May 1-3, 2020, is the most recent installment in our effort to track voter opinions on the top political and public-policy issues of the day. Please consult the topline results for the full wording of the questions in the KOM Colorado Poll™.

A 3-to-1 majority of Coloradans support Governor Polis' Safer-At-Home order.

A strong majority (68%) of Colorado voters support Governor Jared Polis' move to the Safer-At-Home order, which started April 27, while only 21% oppose it. Safer-At-Home garners majority support from Democrats (63% support – 22% oppose), Republicans (75% support - 18% oppose), and Unaffiliated voters (66% support – 22% oppose).

An overwhelming majority (78%) of voters in six metro-Denver counties (Adams, Arapahoe, Boulder, Broomfield, Denver and Jefferson) also support the decision by their local officials and Denver Mayor Michael Hancock to extend the stricter, local Stay-At-Home orders through May 8.

Governor Polis receives high marks for his handling of the coronavirus pandemic (71% approve to 19% disapprove) and has also seen a significant increase in his favorability with voters — up to 66% favorable from 50% favorable last summer.

Mayor Hancock receives an equally strong rating from Denver voters for his handling of the coronavirus pandemic (69% approve to 18% disapprove).

Most Coloradans (8-of-10) agree that face masks should be required.

A majority (78%) of Colorado voters agree that people should be required to wear face masks or face coverings when they go to a store, bank or workplace; while only 16% oppose requiring masks in public. In these hyper-partisan times, face masks are a non-partisan issue, supported by Democrats (87%), Unaffiliateds (79%) and Republicans (68%) alike.

Colorado is not out of the woods — financially speaking — but voters remain optimistic.

The majority (62%) of Coloradans are of the opinion that the coronavirus will cause a long term economic downturn that will last for several years, compared to the minority (26%) who believe the coronavirus is a short term obstacle and our economy will bounce back soon. However, the concern about an economic downturn and coronavirus pandemic has not dampened optimism about the state with a 56% majority saying Colorado is heading in the right direction, which speaks to the value Coloradans place on leadership during this crisis.
